RESOLUTION AUTHORIZING FOOD AS MEDICINE IN COMANCHE NATION: A FOCUS GROUP APPROACH TO NEEDS ASSESSMENT, PART 2

WHEREAS, the Comanche Nation is a federally recognized Indian Tribe with a constitution approved by the Secretary of the Interior on January 9, 1967, to safeguard tribal rights, powers, and privileges to improve the economic, moral, educational, and health status of its members; and

WHEREAS, the tradition of sovereignty of the Comanche Nation, since time immemorial long predates the existence of the Nation, establishes the inherent sovereign powers and rights of the Comanche self-government; and

WHEREAS, the Comanche Business Committee is the duly elected official body designated to conduct business for and on behalf of the Nation pursuant to Article VI § 7 (c) of the Comanche Constitution; and

WHEREAS, chronic health disparities are prevalent among American Indians and Alaska Natives (AI/ANs), and contributing factors may be the availability, accessibility, and affordability of healthy foods, in addition to food choices. AI/AN populations disproportionately reside in food deserts, defined as areas with restricted access to affordable and nutritious food options. Shocking disparities in food security, defined as unreliable food access at times due to lack of money or other resources, exist; and

WHEREAS, key interventions and programs focused on addressing individual and community nutrition needs including medically tailored meals and produce prescriptions can be described as "Food is Medicine." Understanding how food and nutrition are experienced, valued, and prioritized by community members is essential to designing approaches that are not only evidence-based but also culturally meaningful and responsive to community desires; and

WHEREAS, the Comanche Nation adopted Resolution #118-225 for Dr. Valerie Eschiti to apply for the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences, Fran and Earl Ziegler College of Nursing, Office of Research, Scholarship, and PhD Studies, Pilot Grant FY 2025-2026 for Food as Medicine in Comanche Nation: A Focus Group Approach to Needs Assessment (now referred to as Part 1); and

WHEREAS, Part 1 was completed, and findings were shared with Comanche Nation leadership; and

WHEREAS, Participants in Part 1 (which had a general focus across ages, with an emphasis on adults) indicated that the researchers should interview those staff involved specifically involved with children's food preparation, provision, and education; and

WHEREAS, utilizing a community-based participatory research (CBPR) design, this Part 2 project will engage Comanche people as equal partners to build trust, foster mutual learning, and co-develop nutrition research that reflects community priorities.
Objective 1: Identify and recruit Comanche Nation staff interested in providing perspectives related to culturally relevant food preparation, provision, and education for children.
Objective 2: Conduct focus groups with Comanche Nation staff regarding needs and beliefs related to food for children; and

COMANCHE

WHEREAS, a qualitative research design will be utilized for this project. We propose to conduct focus groups, each with interested staff of departments that provide food for children of Comanche Nation. These initial groups of interest are as follows:
1. Comanche Academy Charter School staff provide meals and snacks to children from kindergarten through 5th grade.
2. Early Child Development Center staff provide meals and snacks to children from 6 weeks 10 years old.
3. Children's Residential Youth Shelter staff serve child survivors of abuse, neglect, and abandonment, including meals and snacks.

WHEREAS, the knowledge gained from this study may serve to identify food-related needs for children, with potential for future grant submissions based on findings to test interventions to meet those needs; and

WHEREAS, recognizing the cultural significance of food in community gatherings, light and healthy refreshments will be provided during each focus group. To acknowledge participants' time and contributions, each will receive a gift card upon completion of the focus group and member checking. Findings will be shared with Comanche Nation leadership to support transparency and collaborative learning; and

WHEREAS, an institutional review board (IRB) protocol modification will be submitted for review through the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences via the office of Human Research Participant Protection; and

WHEREAS, the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences, Fran and Earl Ziegler College of Nursing, Office of Research, Scholarship, and PhD Studies, Pilot Continuance Grant FY 2025-2026, has awarded Dr. Eschiti $2,000.00 in funding; and

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that the Comanche Business Committee hereby authorizes Dr. Valerie Eschiti to conduct the funded study; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, the Comanche Business Committee, acting for and on behalf of the Comanche Nation, does hereby authorize this Resolution for such intent.

RESOLUTION AUTHORIZING PARTNERING TO SUPPORT PRECONCEPTION HEALTH IN COMANCHE NATION

WHEREAS, the Comanche Nation is a federally recognized Indian Tribe with a Constitution approved by the Secretary of the Interior of the United States on January 9, 1967, to safeguard tribal rights, powers and privileges to improve the economic, moral, educational, and health status of its members; and

WHEREAS, the tradition of sovereignty of the Comanche Nation, since time immemorial long predates the existence of the Nation, establishes the inherent sovereign powers and rights of the Comanche self-government; and

WHEREAS, the Comanche Business Committee is the duly elected official body designated to conduct business for and on behalf of the Nation pursuant to Article VI § 7 (c) of the Comanche Constitution; and

WHEREAS, maternal mortality and morbidity remain an urgent public health concern in the United, and within Oklahoma. Recent Oklahoma State Department of Health (2025) data report a maternal mortality rate of 31.9 deaths per 100,000 live births in Oklahoma, and a staggering 67.5 deaths per 100,000 live births among American Indian/Alaska Native women. Furthermore, chronic disease and health conditions, such as heart disease, have risen as one of the top causes of maternal mortality, underscoring a critical need for early and preventative health strategies to promote maternal health equity; and

WHEREAS, preconception health represents an early and impactful window for health promotion and prevention and has significant implications for maternal, infant, and long-term community health outcomes. Preconception health refers to the promotion of overall health and well-being across the lifespan, when an individual is planning their reproductive life course. Preconception health focuses on optimizing physical, mental, and social health by identifying and addressing health needs and risk factors early, supporting individuals in achieving their best possible health now and in the future, including if pregnancy is desired at any point; and

WHEREAS, current preconception health recommendations and evidence are grounded largely in colonized, biomedical frameworks that may overlook the cultural, structural, and lived realities shaping how Comanche people may perceive and engage with health before pregnancy. At the same time, access to preconception education, resources, and supportive services often varies across communities and healthcare settings. There is a strong call for formative, community-engaged research assessing Indigenous knowledge and attitudes surrounding preconception health, uptake of interventions, and barriers and enablers to care. Additionally, understanding how preconception health education and services can be designed, implemented, and sustained in ways that are meaningful, accessible, and responsive to community needs should be a top implementation science priority for Oklahoma. Implementation science is the study of methods that bridge the research-to-practice gap and promote uptake of evidence-based interventions into practice. Not only does implementation science promote community-engaged work, but also uses methods to identify relevant context, develop relevant strategies, and promote success outcomes, in addition to health outcomes; and

WHEREAS, following a community-engaged research design, this project aims to engage Comanche people as equal partners to explore interest in the project and idea of preconception health, understand feelings and experiences surrounding preconception health, identify multilevel cultural and structural determinants shaping preconception health engagement, and potentially inform future intervention development.

Objective 1: Build and cultivate equitable partnerships with tribal leaders, healthcare providers, community champions, and community members to guide the exploration of preconception health and life course wellness priorities.

Objective 2: Explore community members' experiences, perceptions, beliefs, barriers, facilitators, and cultural factors influencing engagement with preconception health and preventive health behaviors.

Objective 3: Collaboratively identify community preferences, needs, and priorities to inform the adaptation or development of a culturally responsive and community-centered preconception health intervention.

WHEREAS, this project will utilize a convergent mixed methods design in which both quantitative and qualitative data will be gathered during individual interviews with each participant following a combined structured and semi-structured questionnaire and interview guide. We propose to conduct individual interviews with interested participants who are female Comanche citizens of reproductive age. We aim to recruit up to twenty individuals, or until data saturation from interviews is achieved. These individuals are uniquely positioned to provide feedback about their experiences and beliefs about preconception health, including barriers and facilitators to this type of prevention-focused healthcare. We will conduct member checking with a subset of participants for review of preliminary themes to verify accuracy and interpretation. Interview participants who express interest in continued involvement with this study will be invited to engage in and serve on a Community Advisory Board (CAB) or with other study components, as appropriate. CAB members will also be recruited separately to ensure community representation and sustained engagement to inform either adaptation or development of a community-based preconception health intervention. We will aim to recruit approximately 8-10 individuals to serve on the CAB; and

WHEREAS, an institutional review board (IRB) application will be submitted through the University of Oklahoma Health Campus via the office of Human Research Participation Protection for approval; and

WHEREAS, acknowledging the significant time and contributions that these methods may impose on participants, each interview participant will receive a gift card upon completion of the individual interview and member checking following initial data analysis. CAB members will also receive compensation for their time and expertise at each meeting. Findings from this project will be shared with Comanche Nation leadership and others to support transparency and collaborative learning; and

WHEREAS, knowledge from this study could potentially inform the relevance of preconception health within the Comanche community leading to future development of beneficial and co-developed preconception health interventions for both women and men. Furthermore, there is the potential for additional future implementation science work to understand the acceptability, feasibility, reach, and sustainability of the intervention, if additional work is desired by Comanche Nation; and

WHEREAS, Dr. Nicole Crossley is currently working on a Food as Medicine research project with Comanche Nation, led by Principal Investigator, Dr. Valerie Eschiti. Dr. Eschiti has conducted several successful research projects with Comanche Nation and will serve as a liaison in this proposed work to serve as a bridge between the academic institution and Comanche Nation, as well as mentor Dr. Crossley in building meaningful community connections and becoming familiar with relevant Tribal protocols and processes; and

WHEREAS, Dr. Crossley is employed at the University of Oklahoma Health Campus in Oklahoma City and receiving training as a maternal health implementation science nurse research scholar at the University of Pennsylvania. Through this scholar program funding of up to $20,000 has been provided to support community-engaged implementation science work in preconception health. This funding is already procured.;

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED, that the Comanche Business Committee hereby authorizes Dr. Nicole Crossley to utilize current maternal health implementation science nurse research scholar funds received as outlined here; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, the Comanche Business Committee, acting for and on behalf of the Comanche Nation, does hereby authorize this Resolution for such intent.
